The University Grants Commission (UGC) is planning to sell Indian education abroad, according to a news report. UGC will be encouraging the universities in India to design their curricula to suit the needs of foreign students. This will be facilitated through the 'Study India Programmes', mentioned the report. The commission will extend support to various universities to organise education fairs in different countries. UGC had to take the step, mainly to counter the burgeoning number of foreign universities coming to India to offer educational programmes. So far, several universities had approached the UGC, said the report.
